"OMG! You are the reason we had to many inside jokes in 6th grade!" I said, remembering the beard, wig, size 16 boots, and sunglasses.

Batman then remembered his childhood when he had pet fish.

"I... Overfed them! And they diiiiiiiiiiiied!" Batman sobbed.

"Isn't that what you just did to that kid?" KC asked.

"I didn't just overfeed him! I almost killed him! ON PURPOOOOOOSE!" Batman sobbed again. Batman sobbed and sobbed until he drowned in his tears. There there was only KC and the boy left to take over.

Chapter 8 by Draeve

KC looked at the little kid beside him. "So, should we like, call Robin over here and leave him to take care of Batman?" The little boy was still shocked, but nodded at the idea.

KC felt around Batman's waist, and found the batman signal, and cast it into the sky, leaving it on, propped on a rock. Sitting there, waiting for about 2 minutes before Robin appeared in the clearing, tired. "What.....ha..ppened...?" Panting.

Looking at Robin, KC replied, "Oh. Batman was being a total creep, we reminded him of a few memories, and he cried himself to sleep, or death, you might wanna check up on him." And left the clearing with the boy, heading to the nearest McDonald's. Leaving Robin to stare and sigh at Batman, slumped on the muddy ground.
